LLL - based on your opinion of this forum, I'm surprised you are standing up so staunchly in defense of Seymour, and the forum in general considering your general disdain for it.

You got pranked. It failed miserably. You were lauded for your brilliance. But, since you raise a valid point, and as usual, can't move on...let's see.

Dear mods - LLL seems to think that I'm doing is wrong on the Duncan forum and believes that this thread should be deleted. He is not, however, interested enough to flag it and ask. So I will:

Dave, Jeremy, etc. Would you like me to delete the thread? Upon request I'll be glad to do so.

Why are you making excuses for him?

Of the million other things he could have done, he had to do this particular stunt. You just don't pull **** like this, especially on a highly visible website.

People everywhere read this forum.

He basically **** in Seymour's Wheaties. And RATT's, for that matter.

And he would've kept going.

Personally, I fail to see what's so ****ing funny about someone directly stealing a passage from a well established musical artist and trying to claim it as their own creation for cheap forum cred.

How ****ing stupid are you?

Anyone with half a brain knew/knows that Aceman did this as a joke.

Dear Aceman:

I didn't flag it, but I did ask both Mincer and jeremy what they thought of someone who steals IP and tries to pass it as their own here... without mentioning you.

I left it up to you to delete it (hence my asking you to toast it), because I had hoped you would be an adult about it.

I could have reported it to Atlantic, RIAA et al, but again, I had hoped you would be an adult about it.

What you did was wrong on any forum, or anywhere, not just here. And legally risky.

As far as I dislike of Post Reply manipulate people into disliking me... it's only about you and some 5 others, bubba.

And prank my ass. There's nothing to prank with. You would have continued to claim this as your own if I hadn't shown up. Because that's what you're all about.

Think about it.

You are the only person who posts 40-year old well-worn riffs from the 1980's.
You are the only guy that constantly 'challenges' others else to post clips, as if that is the only measure of whether someone plays guitar, you fire insult after insult at them if they don't.
So he set up an account, literally named "Raticus Finkus" and posted an actual isolated guitar clip, (which you have been known to use isolated tracks without permission also), all just as a prank.
You called him out, so the joke is over.

But it's amazing that you still don't get it.
You actually believe he was serious?

I am going to call Atlantic Records and demand to speak to the manager.

You are wrong on numerous items:

I only challenge Securb to post clips, because he still owes me one after he ran away with his tail between his legs from his own clip challenge to myself a few months ago.

I do, however, promote clip posting. We need more of this. Keeps the place interesting and afloat, and that's what it's all about.

I use backing tracks of either my own or actual ISOs (drums/bass), but I always state if the real deal, and never pretend to pass off their actual work as mine.

When is it okay to take something someone else created (literally the actual audio) and tell everyone on the internet it's yours and that you made it?

One has to assume by yours and some others' responses here that you're all cool with musical plagiarism.

And your defense of his actions is... well, laughable. 😏
